

WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY IN ST. LOUIS GRADUATE STUDY IN CLASSICS

The Department of Classics at Washington University in St. Louis invites applications to its graduate degree programs, including its new Ph.D. The Ph.D. trains candidates for careers in research and teaching on the Classical world, and Washington University's program offers optional special tracks in Ancient Music, Performance, History, and Philosophy. For individuals with a strong undergraduate foundation in Latin and Greek, the M.A. degree is a solid basis for further graduate study in Classics and related fields. The M.A.T. program run by the University's Department of Education offers a degree with a concentration in Latin for applicants interested in teaching Latin and Classics at the secondary level. Ph.D. candidates are fully funded with tuition remission, fellowships, and teaching assistantships; M.A. students may obtain partial financial assistance as well.

In addition to listed Department Faculty, numerous Affiliated Faculty in Philosophy, History, Performing Arts and other areas participate in our graduate programs and Classics community.

Students will enjoy not just the resources of the Washington University campus, but also the inexpensive living and the vibrant arts and recreation scene of the city of St. Louis.

DEPARTMENT FACULTY AND AREAS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

- Assistant Professor Karen Acton: Roman history and historiography of the late Republic and early Empire; power and identity in the ancient world; Roman numismatics
- Associate Professor William Bubelis: Greek history and historiography; the Attic orators; Greek religion, epigraphy and numismatics, the ancient Near East, the ancient economy and Greek social history
- Professor Catherine Keane (Director of Graduate Studies): Roman poetry and poetics; satiric genres; Greek and Roman drama; ancient literary criticism.
- Assistant Professor Tom Keeline: Latin prose; ancient education and scholarship; lexicography, metrics, and textual criticism
- Professor Timothy Moore (John and Penelope Biggs Distinguished Professor of Classics and Chair): Greek and Roman comedy; Roman historiography; the Classical Tradition; ancient music
- Assistant Professor Luis Alejandro Salas: Greek and Roman medicine and philosophy; ancient intellectual history; ancient psychology; philosophy of language
- Associate Professor Zoe Stamatopoulou: archaic and classical Greek poetry, the symposium, ancient biographies of poets, reception of archaic Greece in Imperial Greek literature

A full description of the Department's degree programs, with lists of Affiliated Faculty, can be found at <http://classics.artsci.wustl.edu/graduate>

For details about the program and requirements, contact Catherine Keane, Director of Graduate Studies: ckeane@wustl.edu or (314) 935-5198

For print materials and information on the application process, contact Cathy Marler, Administrative Assistant: classics@wustl.edu or (314) 935-5123

*Department of Classics - Washington University
Campus Box 1050, 1 Brookings Drive, St. Louis, MO 63130*