

DEPARTMENT OF CLASSICAL STUDIES

PhD in Classical Studies

Michigan's Department of Classical Studies has roots that reach back to the founding of the Ann Arbor campus in 1841. Recognized as one of the outstanding Classics departments in the United States, it is known for the quality and breadth of the training offered not only in traditional areas of language and literature, but also in related and comparative disciplines.

Application deadline: December 15

- Financial support for five years, with opportunities for additional support for travel and language study
- Teaching opportunities in Classical Civilization, Latin, and Great Books courses
- Interdisciplinary affiliations with: IPGRH (Interdepartmental Program in Greek and Roman History), IPCAA (Interdepartmental Program in Art and Archaeology), Philosophy, Comparative Literature, History of Art, English, Middle East Studies, and Women's Studies
- Access to the Kelsey Museum of Archaeology's extensive collection and to the Papyrology Collection, a world-renowned repository of ancient texts

lsa.umich.edu/classics

Faculty

Natalie Abell, Classical Archaeology

Sara Ahbel-Rappe, Greek Literature, Ancient Philosophy

Ruth R. Caston, Latin Literature

Aileen Das, Greco-Roman and Islamicate Medicine and Philosophy, Reception Studies, Intellectual History

Basil Dufallo, Latin Literature, Reception Studies

Ian Fielding, Latin Literature, Reception Studies

Benjamin Fortson, Indo-European Linguistics

Sara L. Forsdyke, Greek History and Historiography, Greek Law and Democracy, Ancient Slavery

Brendan Haug, Graeco-Roman Egypt, Papyrology, Environmental History of Antiquity

Richard Janko, Greek Literature, Papyrology

Artemis Leontis, Modern Greek Language and Culture, Reception Studies

Lisa Nevett, Classical Archaeology

David S. Potter, Roman History and Historiography

Christopher Ratté, Classical Archaeology

Celia Schultz, Roman History and Religion, Latin Literature

Francesca Schironi, Hellenistic Scholarship, Greek Science, Greek Literature, Papyrology, Reception Studies

Nicola Terrenato, Roman Archaeology and History

Arthur Verhoogt, Papyrology

